At the World Airport Awards 2019 held by Skytrax^{*1} of the UK, Haneda Airport's passenger terminals^{*2} were presented with first place in the World's Best Airport Clean category for the fourth year in a row, and its domestic terminals were awarded first place in the World's Best Domestic Airport category for the seventh year in a row. Haneda Airport was also awarded first place in the new category of PRM and Accessible Facilities^{*3}.

In the World's Cleanest Airports category, once again, the cleanliness and comfort of Haneda's terminals was recognized, and the airport took first place for the fourth consecutive year and the sixth time in total.

In the World's Best Domestic Airports category, Haneda Airport's domestic terminals were commended in general for their ease of use, comfort, and other factors, leading to Haneda's seventh straight win in this category.

In the newly established category of PRM and Accessible Facilities, Haneda Airport was named as the World's Best Airport for the excellence of its approaches to passengers requiring mobility support, such as the elderly and people with disabilities.

In the World's Best Airport category, which ranks airports on an overall assessment, Haneda Airport was awarded second place.

At both its domestic and international terminals, Haneda Airport has an extremely important role to play in furthering Japan's development as a tourism-oriented nation and in the strengthening of its function as a hub airport that takes advantage of Japan's domestic air transport network.

With the 2020 Tokyo Olympic and Paralympic Games fast approaching, the whole of Haneda will work together to provide facilities and services that offer excellence in convenience, comfort, and function at both the domestic and international terminals.
